1132214: y
Ruth Sherman (1132214): [Submitted Question]
[G]Brenda: Hey Ruth, I agree with you I hate PP when the speakers have awful voices- one of the reasons I started my business.Also, FYI: as a College Instructor, I do use Power Point often and try to avoid the boring pattern that most profs use -if you want more interesting animation forms of P.P. use Prezi and go to Presenter Media which you can add right onto PP Microsoft 2010(have super visuals)- I use snapshot (free) to capture images; also I use Adobe Audition for audio; but most people like Soundforge or Audacity. Check out Compelling.tv YouTube tutorials <http://youtu.be/XiQr5efiW7o> where he shows you in 15 minutes how to record and sync up your power point slides with your audio and turn it into a YouTube video.

1132214: great! thank you!

[G]Catherine: Don't use copyright music or photos or you will be screwed. As a designer, we get really ticked off when people use our photos without permission.

[G]Matt: True dat

[G]Brenda: Bigsock too

[G]Brenda: bigstock

[G]Catherine: Weiner needs a big sock apparently,

[G]Brenda: Thanks for the clarification

[G]Matt: freedigitalphotos.net (if you use free you have to put a credit in)

[G]geeta: I think it is a good idea - to get a signed release from clients - as designers we get them to sign off releases for using photos of their projects

Ruth Sherman (1132214): [Submitted Question]

[G]Brenda: did you get my question about release form when recording others?

1132214: y
